Father And Son Banquet Held At Esker Church

Busy week was in progress at Esker United Church as all boys groups joined together to hold Father and Son week activities.

Friday evening a banquet was held in the church hall with the mothers and members of the C.G.I.T. serving the dinner.

At the close of the banquet toasts were proposed by Bob Baker, Bill Page, Bill Lewis, Bill Darcy, followed with a short and inspiring message from H. Fackler.

Sunday morning at the hour of the morning service the annual Father and Son service will be held commencing with a prayer.

The service will be conducted entirely by boys and the guest speaker will be Dr. G. H. Brown. Boys assisting in the service will be Cliff Owe, Percy Roy, Harvey Dodds, Ronnie Dailly, Stan Vanderhoef, Lloyd Phillips and Milton Carlson.

The week's activities were planned by Harry Wankler, Herb Seville, Russ Hamilton.

After an enjoyable day, pupils of St. Mary's high school have readily resumed their studies. Grade 12 students are hard at work preparing for their final examinations in June.

The annual Easter dance was held during the holidays and proved most successful.

Publication of the school paper, "The Bell of St. Mary's," has been suspended until next year.

C.G.I.T. Use Diet Study To Good Purpose

During the past season the C.G.I.T. girls of Beaver Creek have been taking a course on the "properly balanced diet." They also studied table etiquette. On April 7, they held a dinner, putting into practice the lessons learned from their course. The cooks for the dinner were Phyllis Hindle, Adeline Gertie, Emily Woskum, Jean Avery.

The two hostesses were Ruth Gerke and Adele Demoritz. Lily Nemich, Helen Sacko, Victoria Joseph, Mae Goldsack, were the waitresses. The critics were Emily Nemich and Elizabeth Harris. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Stephens and Rose and Sophie Kaminsky.

The leaders, Miss Kinch and Miss Hickenbotham helped with the arrangements.

Metropolitan C.G.I.T. held their annual Banquet and Dinner at the Knott Hotel in the basement of Knox church. The leaders and girls chose the theme "salting for decorations and program, which included the address by Rev. Thorsen.

The girls were asked to wear a scarf, a pin, a brooch, two vocal solo, and a reading.

The W.C.T.U. of Wesley church entertained the C.G.I.T. at the last meeting. A play was presented after which refreshments were served.

Sports Night Arranged At Victoria High

By MARJORIE PENDLETON

Winners in the various V sports gathered together in the school gym, Friday, for a festive evening. The high scores were given by V-cards which will henceforth be proudly displayed on their school sweaters as evidence of the fact that they "stayed the mark" in one or more of the many forms of athletic activities.

During the evening two all-star girls' teams chosen from Sons and Vics gave an exhibition game of basketball which furnished the spectators a chance to see form at its best. It was a great play that put the game on a new level.

After the game the floor was cleared for dancing, when the less active but earnest students of the "peripatetic art" were accorded the chance to show their stuff. Later everyone was in condition to enjoy the refreshments that were served.

Rehearsals for two plays, one by Florence Wain and the other by Roy Spiller, were resumed on Monday. At a staff meeting the plans for the final production of the season were discussed.

The girls' basketball team will be distributed to the students in early June.

Fastening Kit Eases Task Of Shelf Building

If you are baffled by the problem of hanging something on a masonry or plaster wall, get a household fastening kit containing an assortment of special plugs or screw anchors, drills, screws and drives, and your dilemma will be solved.

With this kit a layman can fasten anything to any type of wall—tile, wood, brick, plaster, marble, slate, stone or even glass.

THE SYSTEM
First, select a drill, plug and screw all of the same size. This is essential to give the screw holding power in the plug. The plug is as large as the diameter of the screw; the drill makes a hole as large as the plug. Therefore compression is set up when the screw and plug are placed together in the drilled hole.

Place the drill in the holder that comes with the kit, then hit the holder with a hammer, rotating it between blows to prevent jamming. Lift the drill between blows, too, to clear the hole of cutting dust.

Drill the hole to the required depth, a trifle more than the length of the screw, minus the thickness of the material, such as a shelf to be fastened.

MORE DETAILS
Hang the self-micro picture by placing the screw through the hole in the object to be hung and driving it with a screwdriver into the hole in which the plug has been inserted.

The threads of the screw do not cut the fibers of the plug, but compress them into a compact mass. This makes the plug conform to any irregularities in the hole.

The same procedure is used for inserting plugs in any type of wall, except tile, in which case a twist drill is used to make the hole.

Yank Troops Get Own Tabloid Paper
LONDON, April 14.—(CP)—The "Stars and Stripes," the United States Army's newspaper for soldiers, away from home, rolled off the press Friday. It is a five column, eight-page tabloid and carries news reports from the Associated Press, United Press and International News.

The 20th Century

This six-room home of modern design has every facility for gracious, comfortable living! Adjoining bathroom, dining nook and utility room are major features, while closets, kitchen facilities and, spacious proportions further recommend it for the growing family. The unique exterior admirably lends itself to landscaping and shrubbery treatment.

New Colors Of Linoleum Make Matching Of Shades An Easy Task

Matching linoleum is the furnishing of a room has been something of a problem for color-conscious housewives until recently. Even if the linoleum colors available were lively, they often did not "go" with curtains, towels, rugs, mats, hangings of kitchen utensils, lamps, ashtrays, etc.

Now one manufacturer of linoleum has attacked the problem head-on. Research in hundreds of stores throughout the country has resulted in a new line of colors for all types of linoleum. They are colors known to match or blend with the most commonly used house furnishings and accessories. The manufacturer even considered color preferences in soap, towels, dishes and clothing!

IT'S USE TODAY
Linoleum today is an all-over-the-house item. It is used for floor covering, under stairer rugs, in dining rooms, for bordering carpets cut to slightly larger than table size in dining rooms, for bedrooms, nurseries, studies and halls. This means it has to be color-correlated with many more items than it once had, and various types of linoleum, such as floor and wall, have to be correlated each with the other.

You no longer need select a certain blue for the floor and then

Laymen Learn Art Painting Window Sash

There is a special technique for painting window sash, particularly newly glazed ones. It can be acquired in an easy way.

First, scrape paint off sash. If you use varnish remover, do it before reglazing, as it might harm the sash putty. Lay it on, rather than brush it. Let the remover remain from three to five minutes before scraping it off with your putty knife.

Wipe Surface
Wipe off the surface with a solution recommended by the makers of the varnish remover. Use No. 60 sandpaper and rub the surface clean.

Next, with a sash brush apply enamel, varnish or lacquer, whichever you choose for the finish. Spread the brush over the brush as you cover the putty that fills the joint.

rubber of the frame, where the glass fits. Never use lacquer over a finish containing linseed oil. It may "bleed" through.

It is correct to have a fine hair-line of paint between the putty and the pane of glass, as a final seal against moisture, which might penetrate beneath the putty. But see to it that it is a hairline, not a thick line of paint.

A GOOD TRICK
One good trick is the use of a rubber brush holder. This is a cap-shaped circle with a hole in the centre through which the paintbrush handle is slipped. The rubber cap also acts as a lid for a glass or jar, holding the brush suspended in turpentine, alcohol or lacquer thinner between usings. This not only preserves the brush, but as it remains on the brush handle while you are painting, it catches paint which runs back when you are painting a spot overhead.

Skunks have the reputation of eating bumblebees and yellow jackets. They pay little attention to the stings.

KEEN INTEREST SHOWN BY CITIZENS

First Air Raid Defence Lectures

Casualty Clearing Posts
Will Be Established At
20 Schools In Edmonton

The keen interest being taken by Edmontonians in air raid precaution measures for the city was demonstrated when more than 1,500 persons turned out to meetings at Garneau, McKay Avenue and Oliver schools at which the outline of the organization being adopted here was explained.

Who's Who

The meetings were addressed by A. W. Hadow, city engineer, Dr. G. M. Little, city medical health officer, and Capt. A. F. Huff, chairman of the air-wardens committee.

Other speakers were Alford Speakman M.I.A. for Red Deer, who was pressed into service at Oliver school while waiting for one of the scheduled speakers, F. W. Kemp, officer commanding, North Battalion, V.V.R. reserve, and C. W. Claverton.

MANY QUESTIONS

The keenest interest was taken in the outline of the precaution measures adopted for the city and many questions were asked by the members of the audiences at the three schools.

G. B. Henswood, K.C., deputy attorney-general, was chairman of the Oliver school meeting; R. H. Little, manager, Gillespie Grain Co. Ltd., of the McKay Avenue school; and Mayor John W. Fry of the Garneau school.

Mayor Fry paid a tribute to the work done by the late Mayor A. P. Smith, D.S.M. He termed this the "speaking of the air raid ward section of the work, and his assistance in other phases of the organization was of immense value to the committee. Mayor Fry appealed for the fullest co-operation.

New Playing An Extended Engagement At The Capitol Theatre

The Marvel of Vision

By J. E. THOMAS, Optometrist

Vision is made up of two elements, sight and light. In order to see clearly and easily and accurately, we must have good sight either through naturally good eyes, or through eyes whose defects have been corrected by lenses, and we must have ample, properly directed light.

Sight and light are as much a part of our common, every day lives, that we take them for granted; yet how important they both are.

Vision enables us to study, to play and to work. It brings us the greater part of our knowledge, and vision is the very cornerstone both of human and individual progress.

Tiny Tot Enjoys Travel By Air

The tiny, year-old air traveller above is Kenneth Patry, son of Capt. Don Patry, Yukon Southern Air Transport mainline pilot, with whom he is shown. Capt. Patry was recently transferred to the Vancouver base to fly the run from Vancouver to Whitehorse, Yukon. Last Thursday Mrs. Patry and Kenneth left Edmonton to join Capt. Patry at the coast. Leaving Edmonton at approximately 1:30 p.m. and flying with favorable winds, they landed at Fort St. John two hours and eight minutes later. The southbound plane to Vancouver was held at the end of the runway and a direct transfer was made from one plane to the other. Again meeting with excellent weather conditions, the plane sped southward to arrive in Vancouver a little after seven o'clock in the evening. Mrs. Patry and Kenneth will make their home in Vancouver while Capt. Patry is based there. Don Patry was raised in Edmonton and received his flying instruction here. He was engaged in bush flying for some years, later flying for Peace River Airways. He joined Yukon Southern three years ago and has been a mainline pilot for the past two years. Mrs. Patry, nee Irene Carson, is a graduate of the University hospital in Edmonton.

Police Lacking Accident Details

Police were unable, Saturday morning to obtain details of an incident that sent Edward Gilboyley, a cripple, to hospital at 10:15 p.m. Friday.

Gilboyley was found lying at the intersection of 102 avenue and 100 street, by Thomas Wilson, employee at the city telephone building, who rushed out of the building after hearing a crash.

There was no evidence of a vehicle being involved and Wilson believes that Gilboyley's crash must have happened on the wet pavement and broken under his weight.

The injured man was unable to give an account of the accident and was taken to the Royal Alexandra Hospital.

Establishment of a regional branch of the Federation of Canadian Artists in Edmonton took place at a meeting this week. J. Gordon Sinclair was named chairman, Miss Mary Mercer, secretary, and George Gates, delegate to the general meeting to be held in eastern Canada. Members attending were Mrs. A. Card, Margaret Chappell, Ruth Haley, Mrs. F. M. Morrison, Miss Mary Mercer, Mrs. C. H. Willis, George Gates and Gordon Sinclair.

Getting Around

With Jack DeLong

Under the terrific pressure of total war, the tomorrow of aviation is arriving today.

Glen Martin, who manufactures the famed Martin bomber, states his company has plans now for a 250,000-pound vessel of the air.

And says Designer Martin:

"Our studies show that no technical considerations limit the size of airplanes. We should be able to build 300,000-pound airplanes in a very few years."

A plane of this size would equal in weight some of the huge locomotives now in use.

They would have a range of 5,000 to 10,000 miles and would carry 75 to 125 tons of bombs from the air.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION
Will Pierre Laval turn the French fleet over to Germany and line up with the French people against the United Nations?

THE ANSWER
FRED KENNEDY, clerk: Pierre Laval, the outstanding pro-Nazi politician, applies to the role of the French Quisling. He is not likely to stop at anything that he can possibly do in order to serve his German master.

THOMAS JONES, junior: Laval in his new job can be depended on to do all possible to help the Nazis. He is a man who believes that the French people will revolt against his leadership. There is definite indication that the people of France are not taking Laval's lead.

WILLIAM MOLLAND, a correspondent: Darling, although he hates the British, will not permit the French fleet to fall into German hands. The French fleet in any manner the Nazis may wish to use it. Undoubtedly Laval will help his masters to turn over the fleet to Germany, but the latter's reluctance to seeing Germany in charge of the French fleet will be sufficient to keep the fleet under French control.

Wanted—A Feminine Invasion of Factories to Speed Arms Output Women in Overalls Join Canada's Industrial Parade to Victory

Thousands of women are employed in small arms ammunition production. Plant managers report that in all operations where girls have replaced men, a high standard of workmanship has been maintained. Many women, including college graduates, are needed.

Women are eminently adaptable to work requiring a great amount of care, deftness and patience. They are being employed in increasing number in the manufacture of delicate precision instruments. Keen-eyed young lady shown above checks screw threads on gauges.

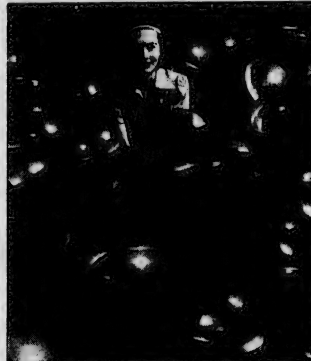

Clothed in comfortable overalls, a girl repairs an engine in a Canadian aircraft overhaul plant. Gay coloured uniforms are provided in hundreds of war factories.

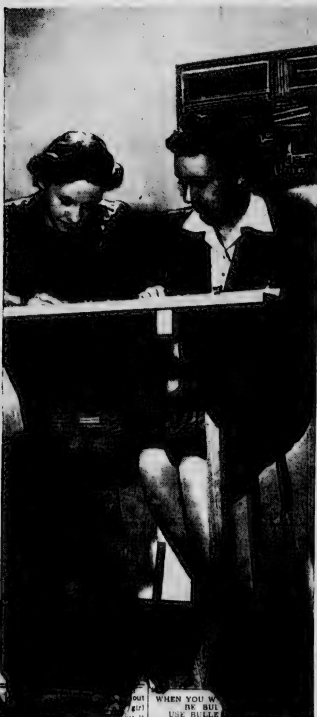

Girl employees in huge Bren gun plant in Toronto enjoy lunch in one of the plant cafeterias. In a great many war factories, full course meals are provided at cost.

In the Dominion Arsenal, girls can secure a wholesome lunch for fifteen cents. Several plants employ full time dietitians to make sure girls get needed vitamins.

Steel helmets must be perfect to be approved by this inspector. Hundreds of girls will be trained for similar wartime jobs by the U.K. and Canada Inspection Board.

In thousands of factories working on contracts from the Department of Munitions and Supply, able, conscientious girl workers co-operate efficiently with men employees.

Between 50,000 and 75,000 women are now at work in war industries. Thousands more will be required to cope with manpower requirements as industry expands and men enlist.

Plants afford nursing facilities to keep their girls in A-1 condition. Pressure of increased production, fast tempo of munitions factories call for healthy, nervous, strong bodies.

Because she is an attractive, industrious girl, Ronnie Foster was chosen as a typical employee in the Bren gun plant where she is shown at work cleaning her machine.

New machinery developed for munitions work has made it easy for any girl to operate even the heaviest type of machine by merely pressing a button or pulling a lever.

Miss Foster, shown working at the left, appears above in her "best bib and tucker" ready to leave for a party held by the employees in one of the cafeterias of the factory.

Escape To Adventure

By Priscilla Wayne

CHAPTER XXXII

Peter slipped softly into his uncle's room just to look at him a minute before he went upstairs to try and watch a little rest.

Charles Dirkey lay very quietly in his bed, his face was very white and he seemed weaker than when Peter had seen him last.

NO WORSE

Peter was comforted to remember that Dr. Serge was very hopeful of his patient's condition. "He isn't getting worse, that's certain," he had said that night. "Here holding every inch of ground he gains, but he's still a very sick man."

Peter stood silently by his uncle's side. The nurse sat watching the clock man moved his head slightly, his eyes opened and Peter was certain that his uncle recognized him.

Charles Dirkey's lips were moving, he was trying to say something.

The something he muttered was unintelligible.

"He's been trying all afternoon to tell me something," the nurse said. "I've watched as carefully as I could but I can't make it out. Listen, he's trying again."

Charles Dirkey was looking straight at Peter, the sick man's lips were forming a word—a sentence. Peter strained his ears to hear. The words were suddenly intelligible. Charles Dirkey was saying over and over again to the limit of his strength, "La Pinon."

"Why, I know what he's saying," Peter said. "He's saying, 'La Pinon.' La Pinon is a mountain. Mother and I used to go up there some times and stay for days at a time when she was painting a picture."

"I was just a little boy then. We rode horseback. It's a long time ago."

The sick man was speaking again. He said very clearly, "La Pinon."

Berthe knew about La Pinon. Even this much exertion was too trying for Charles Dirkey. His eyes closed and he seemed to drift off into a troubled sleep.

"His recovery may be weeks delayed," the doctors had said. "The poison affected the nerve centres. Perhaps he will never speak again even if he recovers."

"Even so, Peter thought to himself grimly, he had been able to say enough this time."

"Please allow me to anyone about this, Miss Berman," Peter told the nurse, a grave, capable girl. She nodded. "I won't say anything about it, of course. If you ask me not to, but what are you going to do? Remember, you're my patient, too, and you are pretty apt to over-estimate your strength."

Wavel says you simply mustn't over-estimate.

NOTHING RAN

"You'll not go away? You'll not do anything rash?"

It was significant that Peter answered only one of the questions. "I will not do anything rash."

Out in the bunk house he wakened Red.

"You look pale as a ghost," Red observed. "How did you get away from all the doctors and nurses?"

"I just walked. They thought I went upstairs to bed. As a matter of fact, I did. Then I came down the back staircase."

"What's up?"

Red was getting into his clothes. He knew by the sight of Peter's excited face that something was about to happen.

"Red, did you ever hear of a mountain called La Pinon?"

"If I ever did hear about it I don't remember now," Red grumbled. "Where is it and what is it?"

"It's a mountain. It's 40 or 50 miles away from here by road—not more than 10 miles by a shortcut. I know."

Red stopped dressing, appeared ready to get back into bed. "There's an old statement that if the mountain went to go to Mahomet then Mahomet would go to the mountain."

"It's the other way around, Red. Mahomet will go to the mountain."

"Well, this Mahomet isn't going to go to any mountain or expect any mountain to come to him. We'll call the sheriff if you've got a real hunch."

"Listen to what I say and then if you want to go to bed all right, but I don't think you will."

"All right, say what you're going to say," Red insisted.

RUGGED COUNTRY

"Just now my uncle tried to talk to me. He kept saying La Pinon. That's the name of a mountain. It's one of the bandits and the country around there is very rugged."

"Yes? Well, what of it?"

"Only this. Uncle Charles said Berthe knew about a cabin on La Pinon."

"What are you talking about, Peter?"

"Just exactly what I'm saying. Uncle Charles says Berthe knew about a cabin on La Pinon."

"Is there a cabin?"

"There is. It was built by Indians of the Jemez tribe. I think my father had it built for Mother. Mother painted, you know. She loved to paint mountain scenery. Father had this mountain home built for her. The Indians built it. It's just a little place. Mother and Father used to go there."

"There's a trail of sort leading it. And after Father died, Mother took me along. We'd stay several days at a time. We'd ride in on horseback, carrying food, and Mother would paint while I played around the clearing."

"It's a wonderful little place, away off the beaten track, where, unless you absolutely knew about it, you never could find it in the world."

"How long since you've been there?" Red asked skeptically.

"A long time—maybe 15 or 16 years. I don't remember."

"And you think you can find the way again?"

"I know that I can."

BERTHE

"What makes you think that your uncle's wife knew where this cabin is? Why in the world would she know anything about it?"

"She liked to ride horseback, you know that. Before my uncle was taken sick, while they were honey-mooning—well, they used to go on long rides."

"That's right," Red mused. "I know they did. Hours at a time."

"Isn't it conceivable that in one of their rides along mountain trails they found this cabin?"

"Yes, but what significance is that?"

"Only this—Uncle Charles believes that the people we're looking for are hidden away in that mountain cabin. I believe it, too."

"But how could they get there?"

"I don't know. There might be an auto trail that leads almost there. I haven't any memory of it. But people didn't use cars for mountain climbing 15 or 16 years ago. Maybe a car could get up there."

"I'm not very happy about going," Red murmured. "If Dr. Wavel says you're strong enough."

"Well, not even ask him," Peter declared emphatically. "Either you're going with me now, Red, or you aren't going. Make up your mind."

"If you put it that way," Red said. "I'm going. You know that perfectly well yourself. I couldn't very well stay behind, could I? Not even if I wanted to. But I'm not happy about it."
